From the desk of the Parish Priest

Dear parishioners,

We have State governments (not Victoria as yet) legislating that priests will have to break the seal of confession and report to police if someone confesses to them that they are a paedophile. If a priest were to do this, he would be ex-communicated from the Church. If someone were to confess this sin of paedophilia, most priests would counsel them to go to the police and report themselves. However, no priest in his right mind would break the seal and secrecy of the confessional, and report the person themselves. State laws are encroaching more and more on the activity and life of the Church.

In Australia, Church and State have remained separate. We "give to God what belongs to God and to Caesar what belongs to Caesar", says Jesus. But this new legislation is an unprecedented interference in a sacred activity of our Church. There is no need for it and it will not be effective. What will have to occur is that the confessional will become completely anonymous again as in the old days. If the priest doesn't know who the penitent is, then he cannot report him. If priests had to choose between going to gaol and being excommunicated, I know what they would choose. However, it is possible that someone will test out this law, and see if a priest will report him. We shall wait and see.

Increasingly, life is becoming more difficult for Christians around the world. There is a growing hostility to Christianity, and laws, contrary to Christian beliefs, are being introduced. So we will have to be stronger to remain faithful to the Lord, in the face of this opposition. We do have a lot to offer in a positive sense. The economics writer in "The Age", Ross Gittens, concluded his latest article with these paragraphs. "What would be wrong with aspiring to make life better for others, rather than ourselves? I aspire to an economy where bosses are less obsessed with earning more and less convinced that being tough on their employees and customers is the way to get there. Why are they sure that making more money under these conditions will make them happy? Surely if they have a happy staff who give customers good value for money, this will be more rewarding for all".

Jesus came to bring a revolution. A non-Christian society is a society where each tries to get as much as he can. A Christian society is one where each one gets only to give away. We "do not live on bread alone, but on every word from the mouth of God".

So we strive to be different, with varying degrees of success, in order to make our world a better place. May our governments support us, and not oppose us in this.

God support us all,

Fr. Brendan
